BIG LEAGUERS
PLAY NORWOOD

Game is Scheduled to Start at 3:30 o'clock at Norwood Park.

The baseball game scheduled for 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at Norwood park promises to be one of the leading athletic events of the season so far as the local athletic fans are concerned. The Cincinnati Reds arrived in the city at 4 o'clock this morning on a special Pullman car attached to fast passenger train No. 2 and are located at the Waldo hotel.

A dinner will be served at the hotel at 6 o'clock this evening to which all lovers of the national game are invited where they will have the honor of meeting the members of the Reds and Frank C. Bancroft, secretary of the Cincinnati club and one of the oldest and best known men in the game today.

The Norwood team is all ready for the fray and as several of the best pitchers of the Reds will not be available this afternoon it is almost a certainty that the locals will win. Whitney will start the game for the locals and if he is in form the chances are that Secretary Bancroft will sign him before he leaves the city tonight as the Reds are in need of some good pitchers. Whitney, while only 19 years old, is one of the best semi-professional pitchers in this section and should make a good showing against the Reds if he is given good support.

The city is flooded with college baseball players today who are all anxious to see the big leaguers in action as they all hope some day to be in the big show. Most of them, however, are friends of Earl "Greasy" Neale, West Virginia's most popular athlete, and are here to see him in action.

The fans should not miss this opportunity to see a first class National League team in action as it will be the only chance of the season.

be done, and the teachers themselves must bring them to this point through their leadership. The teachers can take up any problem which should be worked out, hang together with the right sort of co-operation and persistence, and solve it. Back of the teachers are the boards of education; back of the boards are the people; so it is their understanding and co-operation which must be secured. The teachers should have the idea of being of service to the community which employs her.

After intermission Dr. Minnich took up the subject "What South America May Mean to Us."

He said, that generally speaking it means trade to us. He showed a number of maps giving the exports and imports of both South America and the United States, and said the question is whether or not we can sell South America more than we must buy from her. In order to get her to buy more we must go down there with capital and create a demand for products. The trade routes are good but we would need to build more ships to carry the increased trade. His discussion was conducted in a very able manner, as all his lectures are. He pointed out that would grow out of securing the trade of South America.

Thursday Afternoon Session. Today was "School Officers' day", and many school officers availed themselves of the opportunity to attend especially at the afternoon session. After some good singing and a few remarks by the county superintendent, C. S. Lawson, relative to the importance of each teacher subscribing for the state school paper, Professor Jackson talked on "Preparation for Twentieth Century Living."

He made it plain that in the working out of this problem the community and school are dependent and must cooperate with each other. Public education in the United States has passed through three stages. The first two were discussed in his talk. The first stage was pay for an education if you wanted it; second, the schools of today are offering nearly the same kind of work that they did twenty-five or thirty years ago, and have failed to take note of the great industrial changes made in the country during that time. Our schools are very well equipped for educating the heads but not the hands of the children. By several illustrations he showed that we must conclude that we cannot measure an education in terms of scholarship alone.

After this discussion State Superintendent M. P. Shawkey addressed the teachers along the line of "The New Citizenship." He pointed out that the people can do much more to influence the results of the legislators than to merely cast a vote for them. He said that if the teachers would send to the legislature a copy of their institute resolutions they would be taken account of. The people should help work out the great problems and not leave it all to the legislators. He discussed three measures enacted by the last legislature, namely, the increase of teachers' salaries, the short normal course and the life certificate. He then spoke of the necessity of a teacher who wants to succeed, doing some systematic reading. The mentioned a number of other important things relating directly to the work of school teachers. The address was a very enthusiastic one, full of life and snap from start to finish; it showed that his whole soul is in his work. Everyone was delighted to see and hear him.

Adjournment was then taken till Friday morning.

Wednesday Evening Session.

Wednesday evening quite a number of teachers gathered upon the Lowndes hill and enjoyed a splendid program. The crowd gathered long before dark to get the fine view of Clarksburg and its surrounding neighborhood which can be had from the top of the hill. Just as darkness began to thicken over the valley the program started by singing "Twilight is Falling" and "Sunset Peace," two very appropriate songs for the occasion. After a number of excellent stories, a couple of readings, and some more songs the crowd moved back to the city feeling that the exercises had been well worth the climb to the top of the hill.

WESTERN STATES

WHICH IS BETTER

Kansas and Nebraska are having a controversy as to which is the greater state. Gov. Capper of Kansas very promptly lays claim to everything good for his state and denies the existence of anything bad within her borders. Gov. Morehead of Nebraska simply points to government statistics and says "there's my answer."

CONGRESS

"That questions affecting society take precedence over economics. We believe that the human element should be considered regardless of its effect on dividends."

"To postpone the strike after the men had voted it," Mr. Garretson declared, "would mean the disintegration of the brotherhoods and 'turning over to the mob of the trains as in 1877 and 1894.'"

Mr. Garretson added that he wants to assure the senators that the brotherhoods were not opposed to arbitration.

"Under ordinary processes of our policies," said Mr. Garretson, "we would be out of accord with all of the five propositions made by the presidents. But in the hope of effecting a settlement we are willing to waive many deep-rooted principles and we are willing to aid in passage of a legislative remedy that will make it possible to recall the order to strike September 4. The eight-hour law, accompanied by a provision to assure the ten hours' pay pending inquiry, and I suggest a provision that the government should bring suit in case a road refuses to grant the pay as is provided in the hours of service law, would satisfy us in this emergency."

"As for compulsory arbitration," said Garretson, "no influence that ever can be brought to bear can induce our organizations to accept it. I want to go on record here as protesting against anything that savors of making men stay at work during any investigation."

Senator Newlands interrupted Mr. Garretson to say that it was his understanding that the proposed bill would not prevent any men from leaving his employment during his investigation. Concerted action, he said, was what it was designed to prevent.

"Quite true," Mr. Garretson said, "but if only men individually threatened to strike on the railroads we would not be here now discussing this proposed legislation."

The brotherhoods, Mr. Garretson said, would not oppose being drafted to run trains as long as it was only for military purposes.

Mr. Gompers, who followed Mr. Garretson, said that the federation supported the brotherhoods and protested against compulsory arbitration. He attacked government operation of roads for military purposes, contending it was conscription and indefensible in times of peace.

Senator Newlands denied this contention that the legislation denied the right of a worker to quit his job. Mr. Newlands reiterated it meant only to affect the right to quit in concert.

Mr. Gompers said he believed he had contributed as much as anybody in America to avoiding strikes.

"But, gentlemen," he said, "there are things worse than strikes. We have got to live when that strike is over and is history and then I ask you will we find upon the statute books a law that says that men are criminals if they strike in concert? Such a condition is intolerable. I trust this legislation will not be enacted."

Senator Newlands asked Gompers to give the committee the solution of the problem.

Mr. Gompers replied that under the circumstances the employees should be left free to strike whenever they saw fit and not forced to "unfold their arms" by law. The question of bringing about peace now, he insisted, ed, should devolve upon the railroad heads, who should be expected to agree to some sort of satisfactory settlement.

"It is more essential," he said, "that the liberties of the employees should be safeguarded than that some suffering, which is certain to follow a strike be avoided."

W. G. Lee, head of the trainmen, went into detail of why the men refused to arbitrate the eight-hour law. "We stand ready," he said, "to arbitrate all other issues as soon as the president's eight-hour day proposal is enacted into law. It is beyond us if we ever hope to remain officers of these organizations; if we ever expect to retain the respect of those men."

Mr. Lovett was heard first to present the side of the railroads. Mr. Lovett said if the public were not involved in the present controversy and if there were not thousands of railway employees not allied with the trainmen the parties involved should be allowed to settle the matter themselves.

"If this burden of $60,000,000 a year is put on the public because of this legislation now proposed the responsibility will be on Congress, not on the railroads," he continued.

"We have done our utmost to settle this dispute, except to surrender what we think a vital principle. If this demand is successful, if they can under duress force out this $60,000,000 Congress will be called upon to pass a law providing for overtime and another burden of $40,000,000 in turn will be passed on to the public."
